The term Digital Equity means “the condition in which individuals and communities have the information technology capacity that is needed for full participation in the society and economy of the United States.

Digital inclusion refers to the activities “necessary to ensure that all individuals and communities, including the most disadvantaged, have access to and use of Information and Communication Technologies.” 2 Investing in digital inclusion includes providing Internet access, teaching digital skills, and providing devices.

Tribal Libraries Eligible for Hands-On Support Through E-Rate Application and Funding Process

USAC and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) announced that the E-Rate Tribal Libraries Pilot Program will return for Funding Year 2024, providing one-on-one assistance to Tribal libraries applying for the E-Rate program.

The E-Rate Tribal Libraries Pilot Program provides hands-on assistance to participating Tribal libraries in all aspects of applying for and receiving E-Rate support during the upcoming funding year. This includes sharing information about program rules and requirements, providing training on how to use the E-Rate Productivity Center (EPC), and walking through the competitive bidding and application processes. The pilot will also support participants during the invoicing and other post-commitment processes, including the service confirmation, the Children’s Internet Protection Act (CIPA) certification, or service substitution requests.

Tribal college and university (TCU) libraries are eligible for E-Rate funding if they also serve as public libraries for their community and meet the E-Rate definition of a library – specifically having regularly scheduled hours, staff, and materials for library users. On July 20, 2023, the FCC adopted a Report and Order amending program rules to enhance TCU applicants’ access to the E-Rate program.
